Risk factors

This document is a financial promotion for the FSSA All China Fund in the UK and elsewhere where lawful. Investing involves certain risks including:

- The value of investments and any income from them may go down as well as up and are not guaranteed. Investors may get back substantially less than the original amount invested.
- Single country / specific region risk: investing in a single country or specific region may be riskier than investing in a number of different countries or regions. Investing in a larger number of countries or regions helps spread risk.
- Currency risk: The Fund invests in assets which are denominated in other currencies; changes in exchange rates will affect the value of the Fund and could create losses. Currency control decisions made by governments could affect the value of the Fund's investments and could cause the Fund to defer or suspend redemptions of its shares.
- China market risk: Although China has seen rapid economic and structural development, investing there may still involve increased risks of political and governmental intervention, potentially limitations on the allocation of the Fund's capital, and legal, regulatory, economic and other risks including greater liquidity risk, restrictions on investment or transfer of assets, failed/delayed settlement and difficulties valuing securities.
- Smaller companies risk: investments in smaller companies may be riskier and more difficult to buy and sell than investments in larger companies.

Reference to specific securities (if any) is included for the purpose of illustration only and should not be construed as a recommendation to buy or sell. Reference to the names of any company is merely to explain the investment strategy and should not be construed as investment advice or a recommendation to invest in any of those companies.

Performance review

Key contributors to performance over the past 12 months included Contemporary Amperex Technology Ltd (CATL), which rose after announcing better-than-expected earnings results, with revenue and net profits growing strongly thanks to its rising market share globally. The company is expected to ramp up production capacity in 2026, which should boost profitability further. Bank of Ningbo also rose after posting strong results. The bank continued to deliver steady earnings growth, thanks in part to expansion in corporate lending, while asset quality trends also improved. On the negative side, Beijing Tiantan Biological Products fell after its earnings results came in under expectations, largely due to challenging industry conditions. A mismatch between rising plasma supply and subdued demand, exacerbated by reduced spending among China's hospitals, pressured sales volumes and margins. Despite this, we continue to believe in the strength of Tiantan's franchise and it is well positioned to benefit from sector consolidation over the coming years. China Mengniu Dairy also declined as weak demand and increasing competition weighed on sentiment in 2025. However, sales growth has started to improve this year and raw milk prices appear to have stabilised. The company's ongoing product optimisation and focus on higher-margin product segments should support expanded margins as the industry recovers.

Portfolio review

New purchases over the quarter included Alibaba Group, China's leading e-commerce business. We believe that the core franchise remains strong, and the cloud and fintech businesses provide additional optionality. Meanwhile, Alibaba has been improving shareholder returns via buybacks and dividends. We initiated a position to monitor its AI developments.

We also bought Shengyi Technology, a leading supplier of materials for the electronics industry (its main product, copper clad laminate, or CCL, is a key material used in printed circuit boards). The company is an established player, with a clear technology and cost lead over domestic rivals.

We sold JD.com to raise cash for higher-conviction ideas.

Stock spotlight

Tencent is the largest social media network and online gaming company in China, with growing businesses in online advertising, cloud services and e-payments/e-commerce. It is, in our view, one of the best companies to own in the Chinese internet space. Tencent has created an ecosystem of businesses which are unrivalled and should continue growing over the medium term. It has continued to develop new functions within WeChat (such as Video Accounts and Mini Shops), which should slowly improve monetisation and enhance the quality of the franchise. Tencent has been a major beneficiary of the rise in AI technology and 'smart' devices. It continues to deliver high rates of growth on top of an already substantial base. Its focus on evergreen games and the deployment of artificial intelligence (AI) internally has helped drive productivity gains and better advertising outcomes. Meanwhile, the rollout of various "user-friendly" AI capabilities within its ecosystem will further cement usage of its WeChat app while creating new avenues of growth. Tencent's Yuanbao AI assistant is already ranked top 3 in China (by daily active users), with integrated search, translation, writing and summarising tools.

Outlook

As bottom-up investors, our focus remains on selecting well-run companies with capable leaders, strong franchises, attractive earnings growth and sound balance sheets. Our portfolio is aligned with the structural trends shaping China's economy, and our holdings in market-leading businesses, led by secular growth trends and underpinned by rising incomes, are likely to remain resilient under different macro conditions.

Domestically, the prolonged weakness in the economy is changing the way Chinese consumers spend. While we still believe in consumption upgrading, we see people spending more on experiences – such as leisure, travel and tourism services. To support this growth, the government is continuing its targeted efforts to boost the demand side, with policies to support employment growth and higher minimum wages. We also expect further actions to stabilise the property sector which should bode well for consumer confidence.

On the manufacturing front, innovation and technological self-sufficiency remains among the key areas of focus for Chinese companies, and thanks to multi-year investments in R&D and supply chains, they are becoming increasingly competitive on the global stage. From electric vehicles to medical devices, Chinese companies are growing their overseas businesses, while the government's "anti-involution" policy should help curb overcapacity and destructive price competition in key market sectors.

Looking ahead, we are optimistic about China's future, despite the occasional bumps in the road ahead. Meanwhile, the risk-reward looks favourable as many of our portfolio companies are trading at attractive valuations.

Our long-term investment themes:

- Dominant consumer franchises which have an edge in brand, distribution and innovation.
- The rise in healthcare spending, due to increasing incomes and healthy consumer choices.
- Beneficiaries of a smarter, more connected world.
- An ageing population and the growing trend of automation.
- Globally competitive exporters with a growing international business.
